In a show of support for craft beer and local business, Mayor Greg Fischer has helped create a recipe for an original Irish Stout craft beer that he has named 5-0-Brew.

He will participate in a special brewing session to create the beer this Friday, Aug. 28, at 10 a.m. at Goodwood Brewing Co., 636 E. Main St. Supporting the mayor's effort will be Phil Dearer, Goodwood president, and Jennifer Rubenstein, director of the Louisville Independent Business Alliance.

The stout will be aged with a Heaven Hill Evan Williams bourbon barrel, with the beer to be served at the Louisville Brewfest on Sept. 25.

The Louisville Independent Business Alliance will host the seventh annual Louisville Brewfest on Friday, Sept. 25, from 4 to 10 p.m. at Louisville Slugger Field.

The event is presented by BoomBozz Pizza & Taphouse and will feature independent local and regional beer, wine and bourbon, as well as food vendors and a silent auction.

Admission is $5 and includes a souvenir cup. Attendees must be 21 or older to enjoy the beer, wine and bourbon. (Designated drivers get free admission) VIP tickets are $45 and include access to exclusive beers, special gifts made by local artisans, and larger pours in a commemorative festival glass. The Brewfest is the alliance's largest annual fundraiser, and typically draws more than 6,000 attendees.

The alliance is a 10-year-old independent and nonprofit business group with a mission to preserve the unique community character of the Metro Louisville area by promoting locally owned businesses.
